

Abstract

In vehicles provided for an inquiring party to submit an inquiry via a communication system to an appropriate responding party that attends to the inquiry in response for receiving emuneration, such as a monetary reward. For example, a first party may use the vehicle to submit an email inquiry that is matched to the appropriate responding party that then generates a response and receives a monetary credit for generating a response. One example is a prominent businessman who agrees to respond to business proposals via email in exchange for payment. Software may be provided in the system to facilitate the advertisement of individuals who will respond to inquiries and the cost for such inquiries.